Dan Famini DVM is the chair of the Agriculture Department of the Santa Rosa Junior College. On the 300-acre Shone Farm campus he teaches for Veterinary Technician, Animal Science and Natural Resource programs. Dan started and manages the farm’s poultry enterprises which include small (100 bird) layer flocks and broiler operations demonstrating sustainable farming practices for students, farmers, and backyard enthusiasts. He is a third generation Sonoma County poultryman and avid poultry enthusiast.

Dr Famini is also a practicing clinician as both associate veterinarian at Heritage Veterinary Hospital in Santa Rosa and the veterinarian for the Pets Lifeline shelter in Sonoma. In addition Dan is the veterinarian for Sonoma County Wildlife Rescue, Songbird Hospital and several other local wildlife rehabilitation organizations.