Dr. Chuck Mohr

Dr. Chuck Mohr is a Professor of Clinical Anatomic Pathology at the UC Davis School of Veterinary Medicine. He received his training in anatomic pathology at the Angell Memorial Animal Hospital (now Angell Medical Center-Boston), the New England Regional Primate Center in Southborough, MA, and at Cornell University. After receiving his ACVP board certification, he continued at Cornell in graduate studies leading to a PhD. Dr. Mohr’s specialty is in urologic diseases of animals. He has co-authored the chapter on urinary diseases in the latest edition of Jubb, Kennedy and Palmer’s Pathology of Domestic Animals and is a member of the WSAVA Renal Pathology Initiative, which recently published on the classification glomerular diseases in dogs.