Candi Stafford has been involved with veterinary medicine since the middle 1970's. She graduated from California State University, Fresno with a BS in Animal Science in 1974. With the goal to go to vet school she became a mom instead, and she got back into the business in 1977. Starting out in private practice and getting licensed in 1979 she stayed there until 1985 when she was talked into applying for a position at the VMTH at Davis. Candi started out as an on-call tech in ICU and Nursing which moved into a full-time job in ICU. In 1988 she moved over to Small Animal Radiology and stayed there until January of 2010. She worked closely with the 4th year vet students and helped in labs with the 1st year students. Safety became her passion. Candi retired from the vet school but did not stray too far from radiology. She now works for Vetray Technologies doing Applications for the clinics that buy the systems from Vetray. Candi has 3 grown children, 6 grandchildren, 4 cat children and 3 dog children.
