

Construction of the $27 million Veterinary Medicine Instructional Facility (VMIF), located between the Veterinary Medical Teaching Hospital and Schalm Hall, began last July.

Name a Room in the School's First New Classroom Building in 35 Years—Now Under Construction!

Naming opportunities are available for areas in the VMIF that still need support:

January 2005: The skeleton of the VMIF grows as steel beams are guided into place.

First Floor

Facility Director and IT Suite—$15,000

Student Lockers and Showers—$25,000

Outside Patio Area—$75,000

Second Floor

Hospital Practices Room—$15,000

Student Study Suite, North—$15,000

Quiet Individual Study Area—$15,000

There are a variety of ways to support the VMIF Campaign, including multi-year pledges and gifts of appreciated stock or real estate.

For more information, contact the school's Office of Development, (530) 752-7024, or Assistant Dean Kelly Nimitz (kjnimitz@ucdavis.edu).

Instructional Facility

Continued from page 1

The VMIF will house two auditoriums, two large classrooms, seminar rooms, private and group study areas, and a computer classroom for the Master of Preventive Veterinary Medicine degree program. It will also provide specialized teaching areas for diagnostic imaging, clinical pathology and hospital practices.

Leaving a Legacy:

Alumni and Friends Work to Complete Funding for the VMIF

The Veterinary Medicine Instructional Facility (VMIF) is the school's first new, permanent classroom building in 35 years.

UC Davis is providing $24.5 million for the basic VMIF and a volunteer committee of California veterinarians is working to raise the additional $2.5 million in private support needed to add important upgrades to the facility including offices for student clubs and the Pet Loss Support Hotline, student home rooms, and an alumni conference/continuing education center.

Many alumni and friends have taken the opportunity to give something back to their profession and leave a legacy for future veterinary students.

So far, generous donors have contributed more than $2.4 million, and naming opportunities are still available for gifts of $15,000 or more to the VMIF Campaign.

February 2005: The Veterinary Medicine Instructional Facility (foreground) begins to take shape. To the west of the VMIF, another key facility is also under construction—Vet Med 3A (background, right) is another element of the School of Veterinary Medicine facilities plan needed to provide sufficient teaching, research and clinical space.

