The first UC Davis, UCD Dublin (‘UCD Squared’) Schools of Veterinary Medicine symposium will be held on the 28th and 29th June 2016 in UCD Dublin, Ireland. The symposium will bring together investigators from two veterinary schools with rich and diverse histories, to showcase current research in each school and to build bonds to drive research and teaching forward to even greater heights across both institutions. Selected speakers from each school along with excellent plenary speakers and a poster session will contribute to a fruitful discourse on a wide range of topics including zoonotic disease, antimicrobial resistance, vaccine development, molecular epidemiology, translational medicine and food safety. This symposium is designed to offer ample opportunities for both formal and informal discussions in a friendly, welcoming environment.

The symposium will also provide delegates with a chance to visit Ireland and sample Irish life and culture. Dublin is a hive of activity and laughter while UCD, Dublin is located just a short 30 minute drive from the beautiful Wicklow Mountains and the rural scenery that is so classically associated with Ireland.

We look forward to welcoming you!
